Introduction

Ann joined CH& as Human Resources Manager after working in HR for more than 10 years at a local non-profit, where she concentrated on staff development, diversity, and inclusion. Prior to that, she worked in radio news broadcasting. Ann credits her varied professional experience, as well as growing up in a family of eight kids, with her inherent interest in peoples' backgrounds and life experiences.

Ann approaches HR from the belief that "human capital" is a company's greatest asset and that we do our best work when we have the resources, training and support to do so. She is enthusiastic about supporting employees and helping them reach their potential and their career goals. Ann was drawn to CH& by our philosophy of thinking outside the box to come up with creative solutions to client issues, and correlates that philosophy to how we develop ways to creatively support our employees.
