Introduction

As a member of CH&'s litigation practice group, Rochelle's experience lies at the nexus of construction and employment litigation. She represents design professionals to resolve a range of conflicts from single-party disputes to complex multi-party litigation. Rochelle's work encompasses all phases of litigation, including complex contractual analysis, engaging in discovery, taking and defending depositions and trial preparation. Her background in finance and accounting allows Rochelle to recognize operational challenges and provide digestible advice from a business perspective, empowering her clients to make informed decisions.

Rochelle's practice also includes employment advice and counsel. She counsels employers on good policies and HR practices to help clients mitigate risk and prevent problems in the workplace. Rochelle keeps them abreast of the changing legal landscape around wage and hour disputes, discrimination, non-competition issues and more.

As trusted counsel, Rochelle also speaks on a range of employment and construction litigation matters. Her passion for good employment practices and fair treatment for all has led her to volunteer with various community groups. She also provides pro bono employment and anti-harassment trainings for business and trade organizations.
